Learn why over 80% of Professionals and Participants Prefer CRG Assessment Systems.

Have you ever wondered why . . .

- Less than 10% of the population is living on purpose?
- Only 8% of new entrepreneurial ventures make it to year 10?
- 75% of employees feel that there is a lack of leadership skills within their organization?
- 50% of employees are completely disengaged from their work responsibilities?

CRG was founded by Dr. Terry Anderson over 30 years ago, in 1979, because he discovered gaps—even misrepresentations—in many of the assessments offered in the marketplace.

A university professor, he could not find a single style assessment that

- Was self-scoring and permitted self-interpretation;
- Honored the participant in the design;
- Was user-friendly and easy to understand;
- Had reliable research;
- Did not require certification to implement;
- Considered a multi-theory approach to its design;
- Included a holistic model for development.

So in sheer frustration, CRG created its first assessment: the Personal Style Indicator.

Unfortunately, many flawed assessments are still in use today. When you compare our model and resources to others in the marketplace, you'll find we are unique in the industry. If you think we are similar, the differences will be clear after you've attended our Certification workshop.

CRG coined the phrase “we give psychology away for the benefit of the learner.” The response to our pioneering approach has been so positive that CRG expanded to create a comprehensive system of assessments and support materials containing 3 million words.

I soon realized there is more than one tool to use to accomplish your goals. The set of tools presented in the CRG Assessment Systems Certification Workshop is Awesome and so easy to understand.

A few years back, a Fortune 500 company asked CRG to deploy a communications program nationally to several thousand participants. At first we agreed to the project. Then we discovered that the decision-makers wanted us to use one of the flawed style assessments.

At the risk of losing a large six-figure contract, we refused to conduct the program unless the Personal Style Indicator replaced the other assessment. The client agreed to swap out the style assessment and later thanked us for our commitment to our core values of operating with integrity.

Our system is available in 8 languages and is in active use in 33 countries and growing.

Here's how we approach assessments.

- CRG assessments teach people how to fish. We don't create a co-dependent relationship with participants. Many other assessments have little value without a debrief from a certified consultant.
- Our assessments complement one another, thus enabling fast-tracked, holistic development.
- CRG assessments yield results that make it easy for participants to act instantly, intentionally, and independently.
- Participants don't want to take tests. They prefer communications tools that provide them with a path toward living, leading, and working on purpose. We provide the means for people to achieve their goals.
- CRG redefines the stereotypical definition of extroversion and introversion and provides a new framework for describing behaviors and performance.

This is a program that has significant relevance, irrelevant of your rocks in life. The program has a natural flow, encourages participation and provides the basis for what I require to improve and develop, A great environment and satisfied all my expectations.

Developing the Whole Person is Critical to Long-Term Success

CRG created the Personality Development Factors Model as a framework to the holistic development of others. Over 3 decades ago, CRG recognized that no single measurement or assessment could or should capture the totality of any person.

To address and honor the complexity of the human condition, CRG has produced and fine-tuned its proprietary assessment system over the past 30 years. The system provides individuals and professionals with a family of congruently designed solutions. We address the conflict, chaos, and confusion that occurs when professionals or individuals use resources from multiple sources.

CRG is best known for its breakthrough design for measuring style with our Personal Style Indicator but we realized we could not stop at the concept of style. CRG has created assessments to measure stress and health practices, self-worth levels, core values, entrepreneurial success factors, leadership skills, learning and instructional styles, plus others.

We will cover all these issues and more during the CRG Assessment Systems Certification workshop.

We look forward to having you join us for an exciting and enlightening 3 days.

I kept saying that I didn't have enough time to take to come to training (code for – I hate group training). But, in fact, the group environment was the greatest joy of the days and is really what caused me to learn how to see the resources and make key changes in our business.

The CRG Assessment Systems Certification Workshop is a program that will serve me in all aspects of my personal and professional development. It was presented clearly, in a fun and trusting environment. Ken, I appreciate the candor, your professionalism, and your competence in all aspects of a great program..
